Course overview

Intermediate level

Why take this course

Develop the skills and knowledge needed to use ICT resources in a learning environment. This module sets out knowledge and skills relating to the pedagogically effective use of ICT to support and enhance teaching, learning and assessment in the classroom.

The Digital Skills in Education module covers the main concepts and skills needed to use ICT as an effective support to pedagogy. It will enable educators to use ICT to enhance teaching, learning, and assessment.

There are many resources and technologies available that can be used to improve learning outcomes. Technology brings potential benefits to education, but it must be used appropriately. It is important that teachers can assess and select the right solution for their classroom environment and plan an ICT-enabled lesson.

Who it is for and how it helps

This module is suitable for teaching and learning professionals in the education and training sectors, including teachers and trainee teachers, who wish to develop their skills in using technology to improve learning outcomes for their students. To benefit from this module, candidates should already have essential digital skills and be used to collaborating online.
